1. Introduction

Crown Law AB ("we", "our", "us") cares about your privacy. We always handle your personal information with care and in accordance with applicable legislation, such as the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation ("GDPR") as well as anti-money laundering legislation.

To all our international clients: regardless of whether our users are based within the EU or not, we are obliged to collect and process personal data following the GDPR.

Our obligations require us to comply with the principles of legality, openness, appropriateness, storage minimization, task minimization, integrity, and confidentiality. For us to comply with the GDPR, our processing needs to be based on one of the following legal bases:

1. legal obligation,
2. consent,
3. fulfilment of our agreement, or
4. balancing of interests.

We take our obligations seriously and always collect personal data responsibly and with your privacy in mind.

This Privacy Policy explains how we process collected information that can be used to, directly or indirectly, identify you as an individual when parties such as clients or their representatives, business partners and consultants, foreign representatives, witnesses, counterparties, representatives, or counsel of counterparties are in contact with us or occur in connection with our engagements. This implies personal data being provided to us or obtained by us.

Personal data is defined in Article 4 (1) of the GDPR as follows:

"'Personal data' means any information relating to an identified or identifiable natural person ('data subject'); an identifiable natural person is one who can be identified, directly or indirectly, in particular by reference to an identifier such as a name, an identification number, location data, an online identifier or to one or more factors specific to the physical, physiological, genetic, mental, economic, cultural or social identity of that natural person."

2. Why do we collect your personal data and what data do we collect?

We collect your personal data to give you the best experience and most efficient legal advice possible. For us to be able to undertake and carry out assignments for you or the company you represent, and to safeguard your interest, we collect your personal data. Also, we collect and process data to meet any legal requirements, administration, and other such obligations.

The personal data we collect meets the accounting and anti-money laundering legislation, which obligates us to perform money laundering checks, before we can accept engagements as well as archiving of documents after an engagement.

Most personal data collected are provided to us via our communication with you (e.g., via e-mail or telephone) and concerns individuals related to the engagement. Sometimes such personal data is not provided to us directly from the individuals it may concern, and sometimes we supplement such personal data via generally available search engines and records.

The personal data we process are:

1. contact details to you or your counterparty (e.g., name, name of business, title, work address, telephone number, and email address),
2. identification details (e.g., passport details, organizational number, and date of birth /ID number),
3. invoicing information (e.g., account number and tax details),
4. also, personal data may comprise other information, e.g., sound recordings or other information relevant personal data relevant to specific engagements.

2.1. Information collected by our website

4. Who do we share your personal data with?

We will not disclose personal data to anyone outside our firm, except when required by law, with your consent or to safeguard your rights and interests. To help protect your personal data we use and employ appropriate technical and organizational security measures.

5. How long do we keep personal data?

5.1. General

We will collect data for as long as necessary to fulfill the purposes we collected it for, including to satisfy any legal, accounting, or security requirements. We will then keep your personal data for at least 10 years under relevant legal requirements. Note that any personal data may be processed longer if required.

5.2. Cookies

We keep cookies and information collected using cookies, following what is stated in our cookie policy, which you can find on <http://www.crownlaw.io/>.

6. What are your rights?

You always have the right to request access to and a copy of any of your personal data that we collect and process - to verify the information we have on you. Such verification may be to correct incomplete or inaccurate information about you. You may also request us to delete of your personal data insofar as this personal data is no longer necessary for the purpose it was collected, or we have a legitimate interest to hold it, such as to comply with relevant legislation. At your request, all your personal data will be deleted as required by applicable law.

You also have a right to withdraw any consent you have given, as well as ask us to cease our marketing efforts toward you.

At your request, we will provide you with all third parties of which we may share your personal data.

The only time we will not disclose our processing of your personal data with third parties upon request from you is if we suspect you are using us for money laundering purposes. In such case, we are obligated to share your personal data with the relevant authorities.

7. Changes to this Privacy Policy

Please note that this Privacy Policy may change from time to time. You will always find the current version on our website <http://www.crownlaw.io/>.
